I travelled to the Netherlands, Somalia, Sudan, Japan, Mexico, France, and every day I would go home and tell my family about my adventures—so it wasn’t just me who learned; they also learned with me!

Amira, 11

As a Sudanese person living in Egypt, I was on the receiving end of stereotypes about my country. I was a bit afraid to introduce my culture to the kids, but from the first day I saw how important what we do is. We do something positive to change misconceptions.
